

(Fitzwarren and Mary Green). I liked it because it was so cute and Whittington took Mary to his first boy.

I think that animals and humans can hear each other if they really listen and love one another. I think I know what my dog is saying.

Both stories teach about hard work and never giving up.

Dick had a hard life for a long time but mostly he was lucky. His best luck was finding Fitzwarren and his cat. When he got rich he gave it to others.

In the farm story, the animals learned to work together and help one another. They also helped the humans. Especially Ben with his reading even though Bernie saved animals they made him smile more.

This author wrote a great book.
