

The Invention of Hugo Cabret

Alice

The invention of Hugo Cabret is a fantastic novel by Brian Selznick. The type of genre is mystery. The problem is that Hugo Cabret an orphan boy, was to fix an broken automan. His father a clock maker found the automan in the attic of an museum. Later on his father dies in the museum which caught on fire. Then Hugo had to stay with his uncle, who had to keep the time in the station. Hugo and his uncle kept the time perfect in the station, until one day his uncle went and did not come back. Hugo thinks that the automan will write a letter from his dad, but he was wrong. The main characters are Hugo Cabret, Isabelle and Georges Méliès. Hugo is a boy who fixes the clocks in the train station, Isabelle is a girl whose parents are dead and George Méliès is a famous magician who started creating movies. I would rate this book 5/5 stars, for it has pictures and words. My favorite character is Hugo, because he has suffered a lot from losing his dad and from his notebook being taken. I like this book, because when you look at the pictures it tells a lot about the story. It also focus on one thing. I think that the George Méliès's life in the train station is very boring and gloomy.

My favorite part of the story was when it was six months later. Why? Because it told me what happened after Hugo left the station. I thought that the automan will write something from Hugo's father. Nope, instead he found a picture of a moon and the signature George Méliès. I thought that Isabelle is very lucky to borrow books out from the bookstore, because I think she has a slight acquaintance with the manager. Hugo was very brave and confident, when George Méliès took his notebook he didn't give up. Hugo will never give up. I would recommend this book for girls and boys 9-12 years old.
