

cockroach wars

By: Blake

Cockroach Wars is an exiting recollection of how a couple of kids stop their parents from selling their house by inventing a way to remotely control insects. The Judges are a humble family that live in a beautiful neighbourhood with a park and stream and a great view of Australia... until the Cadwallers win the lotto of a lifetime. The lotto of a life time is not your normal lottery; it doubles every week when no one wins it. After 10 weeks the lotto is over $40,000 000. Imagine if you won a lottery that big, you would be talking like a baby. Well that's exactly what Beverly did. So, all the money went to the person who wanted it most, her husband Dick. Dick Cadwaller had parties every day and every night, and the guests where just as rich as he was. All the invitees arrived by helicopters wich basically blew the Judges roof off. Now if you had neighbours like that you wouldn't be too happy about it either. Just as their parents are about to sell the house, Toby and Emma (the Judge children) created a way to attack and ruin Dick's parties - insects.

My favorite character is Emma. She invented the remote control chips and is really creative. Some of the other characters include Toby, the Judge parents, Dick, Beverly and the Cadwaller children. My least favorite character is Dick because he doesn't care about other people; he only cares about himself and his reputation. My favorite part is when Emma controlled the cockroaches to pee in Dick's new champagne pool.

In this book I learned that you can only push someone so far before they get back at you. The Cadwallers pushed the Judge family to the end of their rope. When you do that other people always get back at you even if you are the richest man in the world.

I would recommend this book to kids over the age of 7 because it has some sarcastic humor that a 6 year old would probably not understand. I would give this book a 10/10 because it was really funny and it had a lot of action.
